MAKING OUR DEMOCRACY PROGRESS

A democracy progresses or it becomes a poor democracy like most of the South American republics. A democracy develops its benefits until all the people are benefited, or it is no democracy at all.

Since our republic was established, the general government has spent untold millions and billions of dollars in our cities where people are gathered in the mass. Carloads of money have gone for million dollar postoffices, great harbor improvements and other projects benefiting that massed part of the population. Every year tens of millions are paid out to the employees of Uncle Sam who live and work in the cities.

Where the government spends five million dollars in a city of 100,000 people, how much does it spend on an agricultural county of 100,000 people and in which are located only a few small towns and villages?

Answer: So small an amount as to be absolutely absurd in comparison.

If it spends the one-hundredth part of that sum, or $50,000, in such a country, that country thinks a miracle has happened.

The government ought to spend at least as much of the public taxes and of the receipts from its bonds where one 50 per cent of the total population lives as it spends where the other 50 per cent lives. How?

To the mind of this editor, the first necessity is the paving and sewerage of the streets of community centers, the small towns of the nations paying for the business prosperity, the convenience, the educational advantage and the comfort of the whole community, and to advance the civic solidarity of the whole community surrounding such towns. Sewering in centers as a national health measure, the sewers to be extended to the farms in good time. Small towns cannot afford such projects; they will do well to keep them up after the improvements are established.

The government can and should afford it. And for every dollar Uncle Sam spends in such public improvements, he will increase the wealth of the nation $10 up to even $100.

A book could be written on the enormous advantages that would accrue to all the people of the United States—all of them—from such extension of government attention to our villages and towns.

It is not a dream; it is plain progress, and this newspaper proposes to urge such government enterprises from time to time in an effort to further democracy in this favored land of ours.

HOMEY PHILOSOPHY FOR 1921

"What is human conduct but the daily and hourly sale of our souls for trifles"—the foregoing is published broadcast as an epigram by the "clever" Bernard Shaw. A lie! Human people in the mass do not hourly, or daily, or even weekly, or yet even monthly, sell their souls. Because the human person loves comfort and entertained and solaces himself sometimes with regrettable little vices and falls into error that flesh is heir to, it does not mean that he sells his soul. The soul is not so easily sold. And mark you, the soul that was made by God is not as easily lost as some people imagine, either.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES

According to newspaper dispatches Chairman John T. Adams of the Republican National Committee and Chairman Cordell Hull of the Democratic National Committee, recently met at a luncheon arranged by a mutual friend and on that occasion met for the first time and formed a personal acquaintanceship. In one respect the incident is perhaps of little importance, and yet it is of considerable significance as indicative of the spirit in which American political contests are conducted.

Republicans and Democrats under the leadership of Mr. Adams on one side and Mr. Hull on the other, are preparing for a great political contest in 1922 and again in 1924. These contests will be fought out not only nationally but in every State in every county, and in every precinct. It will be a contest of issues, however, and not of personalities. It will be a contest between personal friends who differ in their views regarding the principles and policies which are essential for the best promotion of public welfare.

Heretofore it has not been customary for the Republican Chairman and the Democratic Chairman to get together at a luncheon. Such social meetings are quite common in local politics. Democrats and Republicans meet in their clubs; they meet in their homes; they are partners or opponents in contests on the golf links or at card table, and enjoy each other's personal friendship notwithstanding their political antagonisms.

Americans fight hard while they are engaged in political combat but as soon as the votes are counted and the result has been determined, they forget the heat of the battle and resume the even tenor of their way in business and social affairs. The meeting of Mr. Hull and Mr. Adams symbolizes this American spirit and for that reason is of more than ordinary significance.

Dr. Ralph Arnold says that the American movement must favor and encourage large oil companies which are able to cope with foreign oil organization, or be prepared to get along with whatever mineral oil our competitors conclude to let us have. In other words we must back our oil industry or ultimately be at mercy of foreigners.

The reduction in lumber freights to the Atlantic coast and points east of Chicago to 90 cents from $1.06 1-2, is a source of satisfaction to the whole Pacific Northwest. It will let a lot of high grade lumber into that part of the country that for a couple of years has been barred by the big rate.—Anacortes American.

Ultimately the taxpayer and consumer must pay, in increased cost of service or products, for all the legislated handicaps and special tax burdens that are heaped on industry and business in the political effort to substitute special taxation as a means of hiding the direct tax load the public must bear. "This from the Industrial News Bureau of The Manufacturer. It would be interesting to know just what The Manufacturer means. If applied to Utah it surely would not mean that it was satisfied with our present system of taxation.

Europe's problems concern not a few Americans much more than do those of this country.

Those of Europe are grave, indeed, but that's no reason why America's problems should not receive earnest attention also. There are enough of them to keep many able men busy.

And if America is not kept strong how is she to lend strength to others?—Phila-Public Ledger.

THE LAS VEGAS REVIEW declares a citizen has developed what is called a strain of "wine" bees. By feeding them sugar and molasses the busy little bees manufacture sparkling wine that resembles Burgundy. And thus the Volstead act has been stung?

French Exempt Football.

Football matches in France henceforth will not come under the heading of entertainments, but within the category of "physical and military education," French courts have ruled. Hitherto gate receipts have been subjected to the entertainment tax. A test case, however, has just been made by the manager of the Toulouse club, who refused to turn in the usual 10 per cent to the state, and the court decided that football was immune.

HORSEMAN WILL NOT BET ON HORSE RACE

John Madden, Noted Breeder, Has Never Made Wager.

For Many Years Kentuckian Has Been Leader of Trotting and Thoroughbred Ovals—Interested in Every Line of Sport.

Could you practically live on a race track and never bet a single cent? Could you develop and sell race horses and never bet a cent to back them up? Could you race a race horse and still never bet on him?

It is not impossible. John Edward Madden, the most famous and leading breeder and racer of thoroughbred race horses on the American continent, does all of this, and still more.

He has a farm at Lexington, 2,000 acres of the finest blue grass land. He has other large interests and possesses a large fortune—but not one cent of this has ever been made through betting on race horses, notwithstanding horses he himself had bred for winning.

Madden as a boy turned his early fancy to the trotting horse. He came to Lexington in 1883, and from that time to this has been the leader of the trotting and thoroughbred ovals.

His first "big" buy was in 1889, when he paid $10,100 for Susan, trotting mare, and in 1890 he paid $33,250 for Robert McGregor, famous trotting sire.

Madden has a lot of sentiment for his horses. He heard that Nancy Hanks, trotting mare, was for sale. He immediately bought her and gave her a home on the blue grass of his farm, and the day she arrived Madden issued invitations to numerous friends for a reception in honor of Nancy Hanks.

Madden has established a cemetery on his farm for horses that have belonged to him. It is arranged within a stone wall built in the form of a horseshoe.

Within the inclosure are monuments to Nancy Hanks, Hamburg and others whose deeds have added luster to the annals of the turf.

Madden always sells a horse when his price is met. He loves the fleet animals, but selling horses that he has developed is his business. He does not like to see them leave him, but as he has always said: "I had rather sell and regret than keep and regret."

He retains his interest in every line of sport, and no event of unusual interest in sports has been missed by him in 40 years. But still he will not bet on a race horse.
